

Fertilizers Recommendation System For Disease Prediction

Totally 54% of India's land area is deemed arable, making it the world's largest agrarian economy. Soil infertility owing to over fertilization, as well as a lack of access and awareness of contemporary agricultural practices, are the different factors that contribute to low agricultural production. The main purpose of this research work is to develop a machine learning-based recommendation system to increase agricultural productivity.

